YOUR CUSTOM TYPING CONTENT:

Junko Tabei climbed to new heights when she became the first woman to summit Mount Everest in 1975. Her love for mountain climbing began as a child and led her to later create an all-female climbing club in her home country of Japan. After conquering Everest (and surviving an avalanche), she set her sights on climbing the Seven Summits (the highest mountains in each of the 7 continents), which she completed by 1992. Tabei eventually returned to school to study ecology and became an influential activist in protecting fragile mountain environments from the impact of hikers and climbers.
